

MENU

MVN SIGN IN >

Don't have an account yet?

SIGN UP >

Facebook Twitter Follow @villagevoice

190K followers

Nearly 1,500 Career
Advancement Courses in
More Than 30 Topics

THERE'S STILL
TIME TO ENROLL
FOR SUMMER

Stretch Marks

BY KIM
LEVIN

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 14, 2003 AT 4 A.M.

Back in the '70s, Chicago-born, California-bred Senga Nengudi shared a studio with David Hammons. "We kind of bounced back and forth," she recalls. "In the beginning he was kind enough to let me use his space, which was an old dance hall, and then later he would use my space." Each had one foot on the West Coast and the other in New York. Her smart, scrappy work also straddled the divide between, as she puts it, "the community and the extreme art that was happening." Swathed in paper, string, or other humble stuff, Nengudi, who had studied dance as well as art, turned herself into an imposing live sculpture in performances that were ritualized, formal, and improvised. She also made installations from old inner tubes, twisted bike tires, and worn panty hose—knotted, stretched, bulging with sand—long before Maureen Connor, Annette Messager, Ernesto Neto, or Sarah Lucas. Old panty hose appealed to her, she says, because of "a residue of stress. That's who we are as women." Along with Hammons, Houston Conwill, Fred Wilson, and Lorna Simpson, she showed at the Just Above Midtown Gallery—the first African American-run gallery on 57th Street. So how come we've barely heard of her?

AA

Facebook

0

Twitter

More shares

0

0

Ten years ago, Lorraine O'Grady called her a "legendary avant-garde artist, overlooked in the discovery of black art . . . an artist's artist." Now Thomas Erben is showing a group of Sengudi's works from the mid '70s. Titled Répondez S'il Vous Plait, but known as The Panty Hose Pieces, they dangle limply, swell into clustered sacs of sand, or are stretched to spread-eagled limits. Painful, vulnerable, grungy, and sexually ambiguous, they're powerful feminist statements, missing links, and eye-openers. Literally and figuratively, they've got balls. And Sengudi, having seen installation become a dominant global medium, is still thinking ahead: "It seems like there needs to be a shift in that vocabulary. Like, OK—next?"

Park Chan-kyong's Multimedia Works Resurrect Korean History

NEXT

Contact: Kim Levin Follow: Village Voice Arts & Culture

ARTS VISUAL ARTS

Get the Theater Newsletter

GO

0 COMMENTS

IN CASE YOU MISSED IT

These 'Old Bags' Are Taking a Stand Against Age Discrimination
With His New Netflix Special, Hannibal Buress Is Done Talking...
Felix Bernstein Tackles His Most Ambitious Project Yet — a Justin...
Village Voice Bolsters Arts Section With New Columns by Michael...

UPCOMING EVENTS

ON YOUR FEET! \(NY\) TICKETS

Thu., Jun. 23, 7:00pm

The Crucible \(NY\) TICKETS

Thu., Jun. 23, 7:00pm

Aladdin TICKETS

Thu., Jun. 23, 7:00pm

Kinky Boots \(NY\) TICKETS

Thu., Jun. 23, 7:00pm

POPULAR STORIES

Just Dance: This Summer's Most Spectacular Performances in NYC
Beach Blues: 'Indian Summer' Is a Little Washed Up
Genesis Breyer P-Orridge Expands the Self at the Rubin Museum...
Black Iris Project Soars Into Its Debut Season With a Plan to...

YOU MIGHT ALSO LIKE

Paid Distribution

20 Most Loyal Dog Breeds. #18 Surprised Us! She Budgets

Eva Husson's 'Bang Gang' Just Can't Even With Teen Orgies

In Xu Haofeng's Excellent 'The Final Master,' the Talking Is as Good as the Fighting

Performers and Spectators Get Intimate in Brooke O'Harra's Living History Tour

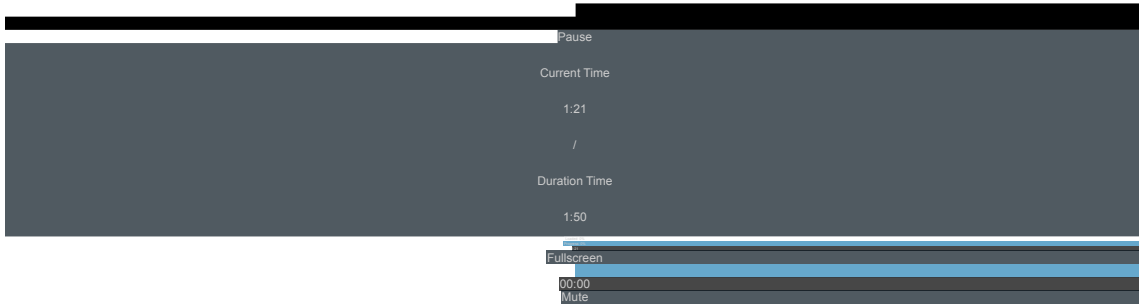

Recommended by

Phillip Lived A Normal Life Until He Found Out He Had A 3.5-Pound Cancerous Tumor. Watch His Remarkable Story.

The University of Texas MD Anderson Cancer Center's collaboration of the best and brightest minds means ideas get vetted quicker, becoming actual treatments faster.

Sponsored by: The University of Texas MD Anderson Cancer Center

Sponsor Content

EVERY MAN HAS A MAN WHO LOVES HIM YOKO ONO

©2016 Village Voice, LLC. All rights reserved.

Moved Permanently
The document has moved here.